

the arrl plan for restructuring the amature band and licensing plan is not needed or is it feasible to enforce and will only lead to confusion on the amature air freq. . dropping the morse code requirment will be benificial to the amature radio comunity by making the hf bands useful by a greater number of ham operators. the current license plan is very generous for the newcomer to amature radio, the current written test for the next license (general) is easy and sufficient the plan of the arrl is too complex and will be to arcain to enforce